

The Seed of Greatness

In every heart there lies a seed,
To sprout in times of want and need,
A strength within that only grows,
When faced with trials and countless woes.

No mountain high, no valley deep,
Can keep one down, who vows to keep
Their courage strong, their spirits bright,
In the darkest day or deepest night.

It's not the falls that measure worth,
But how we rise from beaten earth,
And bravely bear each heavy load,
Upon life's winding, rocky road.

Though storms may come and winds may blow,
And push us where we'd not choose to go,
The seed within just grows more strong,
It's been within us all along.

So, rise, brave soul, and face your fear,
For every setback makes it clear,
That you are stronger than your pain,
Each loss is but your future's gain.

In every heart there lies this truth,
A fire unquenched since early youth,
With courage, we can all endure,
For it's in resilience, we are pure.
